Dear FCC Commissioners,

You must maintain and preserve Net Neutrality. In nations that have abandoned it, competition and innovation are stifled, and political discourse hamstrung. Americans do not want the internet to be another monopolized cable TV-like commodity, full of overpriced and irrational “packages,” we want an internet that is a level playing field for all comers.

Gutting Net Neutrality would benefit only a tiny set of wealthy corporations. Americans are watching you very closely, and will not stand for anti-consumer actions that appear to result from payments and bribes to politicians, and thus the FCC. Do the right thing.

Sincerely,

Richard Ismach
